TOTAL ABSTINENCE FORCES OF CATHOLIC CHURCH HERE TODAY

Great Army of Temperance Workers Gathers in Boston for Four Days' National Convention to Be Held in Faneuil Hall—Eminent Speakers to Address Delegates on Important Topics

FROM all sections of the United States prominent workers in the Catholic Total Abstinence movement will come to Boston today, to-morrow and Tuesday for the fortieth national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, to be held in Faneuil Hall August 9, 10, 11 and 12. An elaborate program has been arranged by the local executive committee. It will include addresses by distinguished prelates of the church, temperance leaders of national fame, and by representatives of the State and city.

A monster street parade has been planned on lines that will make it the most impressive spectacle of its kind ever seen in Boston.

Although the convention does not begin until Tuesday, the first tramp and music of the visiting crowds will be heard in the city today, when a whole regiment of total abstaining soldiers will arrive at South Station from Pennsylvania.

This regiment comes from Wilkes-Barre. It is due at the station at 7:15 this morning. At 9 a. m. the regiment will attend mass in a body at St. James Church, Harrison avenue. After mass the men will march to Castle Island, and go into camp at Fort Independence.

ENTIRE COUNTRY IS TO BE REPRESENTED

Delegates and societies from distant parts of the country will be in the city today to take part in the convention. The event is expected to be one of the largest and most important in the history of the movement.

The chief marshal requests that all motorists in the city be notified of the convention. The parade will start at 11 a. m. and will proceed through the city streets.

The board of government has decided to hold the convention in Faneuil Hall. The decision was made after a long and careful consideration of the various options.

The parade will start at 11 a. m. and will proceed through the city streets. It is expected to be a very successful and enjoyable event.

There will be a number of symbolic acts in the parade, and the participants are encouraged to take part in these acts. The event is a testament to the power of the Catholic Total Abstinence movement.

The service of the Cathedral will be held at 11 a. m. on Tuesday. The service is expected to be a very solemn and moving one.

The delegates will be met by the local executive committee at the station. They will then proceed to the hotel where they will be staying during the convention.

ALICE LONGWORTH'S 'CIGARETTE ISSUE'

W. C. T. U. and Other Bodies
All Over Country Protesting Women's Smoking.

Miss Sears's Denial and Miss Gannon's Apology

BEVERLY FARMS.
My Dear Miss Gannon—Please excuse me for not answering your letter before. I assure you the newspaper is not about as very much exaggerated, and most of them are not true at all. Certainly no one appears of women smoking cigarettes, and I never smoked them myself.

Very truly yours,
ELEONORA SEARS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—"I am exceedingly gratified to hear from Miss Gannon," says that she does know Alice Longworth. She immediately writes Miss Sears and makes the same denial, at the same time telling her that she is not a cigarette smoker.

Gannon, head of the International League of America.

"The 'Alice Longworth cigarette' issue," says a woman's club, "is a national one, for the women's club, and some other reform organizations are concerned." While Mrs. W. C. T. U. and other bodies, and resolutions on the question, the W. C. T. U. in various parts of the country, especially in the West, are protesting the agitation.

From Indianapolis last night said that "Gannon and Mrs. Alice Longworth" would be the principal topic of discussion at a big speaker meeting in New York, N. Y., of that city. This was stated in the advertising of Mrs. E. M. Arthur, president of the union after Mrs. Longworth with the other union officers. Resolutions for the union were also adopted. Mrs. Longworth is admitted to Mrs. Longworth's meeting, which will be held in the afternoon.

Mrs. Gannon on Other Side

The agitation is drawing prominent attention on both sides of the woman's club, and the question of whether it is to be a national one, or whether it is to be a local one, is being discussed. It is a question of whether it is to be a national one, or whether it is to be a local one, is being discussed. It is a question of whether it is to be a national one, or whether it is to be a local one, is being discussed.

Sorry for Mrs. Longworth.

This opinion is also held by some of the best of the Anti-Cigarette League, head of the Anti-Cigarette League, Washington, D. C. She said at the Martha Washington Hotel in New York.

"It is unfortunate that Mrs. Longworth cannot not produce any more in the way of evidence, but she is a woman of great power, and her influence is being used for the good of the cause."

"A Fearful Bad Example."

"It is a fearful bad example," that anyone should smoke cigarettes, especially so when the President should do so. It is a fearful bad example, that anyone should smoke cigarettes, especially so when the President should do so.

Deaths Are Appalling.

"Then, Mrs. Longworth's action," says a middle class woman, "is a fearful bad example. It is a fearful bad example, that anyone should smoke cigarettes, especially so when the President should do so."

SHERMAN REQUEST INVESTIGATION BY SENATE

Vice-President is Gratiified to Learn of Hamon's Denial of Charges.

SORRY GORE IGNORED HIM

"However, the Good Lord Hasn't Made Us All Alike."

Says Vice-President.

COLUMBIA, Aug. 6.—The Vice-President, Thomas G. Marshall, has not attempted today to conceal the gratification he feels over the emphatic denial of the charges against him made by Senator Hamon at the close of the congressional committee's investigation of Senator Gore's charges that an effort was made by the United States to secure the release of the President of the United States from the hands of the Mexican revolutionaries.

Mr. Sherman also related his desire to be called as a witness in the case, and said that he had no objection to the fact that the committee had called him as a witness.

AMERICANS IN LONDON SAY ROOSEVELT IS FAST LOSING HIS GROUND AS A LEADER

BY WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Cable to Boston Sunday American.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—There are so many Americans in London that it is almost as much talk about Americans here as about the great British in the hotels and other public resorts. I was present this week at a vehement debate between two well-known Americans for the governorship of New York. Both men are Democrats, one a Presbyterian, the other a fervent Catholic. One was a passionate opponent of Roosevelt, the other a close personal friend and a political adherent of the ex-President. They differed radically about most questions, but I was surprised to find them absolutely agreed upon two points:

First, that far and away the best man to succeed Governor Hughes was former State Comptroller Glynn.

Second, if William Randolph Hearst endorsed his nomination, Glynn's victory was a foregone conclusion.

As an outsider, I had no opinion to offer. I merely listened to the debate and record an unanimous confession.

I checked the other side of the coin, and found an American notable whom I had not met for seven years. I asked him about the future of American politics. He replied: "The situation lies between two men, Roosevelt and Hearst. Hearst is the man of the future, and the down grade. Every day since he landed in New York he has lost ground."

An Irish-American who held office under Roosevelt assured me that Catholics would never forget and never forgive the affront which he considered Roosevelt had put upon the Pope during his visit to Rome.

These remarks may be straws by the wayside, but they seem to the passers by to show how the wind is blowing.

Editorial that has begun counting up the American side in the New-England campaign. I am at the Hague. I hope to be present at the close of his career, which will also end the war. The award is not likely to be delivered to the public. It is a secret. A verdict would not merely settle a comparatively trivial legal question; it cannot fail to have a wide-reaching influence on international relations.

Recent outbreaks of insubordination on the part of British labor have led to the suggestion that some sort of Hague tribunal is needed to reinforce the authority of trades union law.

The suggestion is that the public should be held at bay by the trades union law. It is the only safeguard of the community against the heedless and irresponsible impulses of ignorant labor.

NEW TARIFF ON LIQUOR IN EFFECT

Reciprocal Agreements With Four European Countries

Come to End To-day.

Beginning to-day all steamships arriving in this country with cargoes of ChianU and port wines from Spain and Portugal and other points in Southern Europe will have to pay the new tariff levied on those liquors as embodied in the Palma-Aldrich tariff act, which was enacted into law by the Federal Government. The reciprocal agreements with Italy, Spain, Portugal and the Netherlands terminate today and higher tariffs will prevail on products from those countries.

much complaint from saloon keepers, hotel proprietors and managers of different hotels at summer resorts over the increase in wines which will follow as a result of the high tariff on wines from Italy and Spain. They say that most of their wines come to this city by way of New York and, that, hence, the tariff will be severe.

Many Complaints Already.
J. P. Martinez, agent for the Nicholas Company of New York, who supplies many of the big houses and Italian concerns in this city with Italian and Spanish wines, said that there is much complaint already made to him because of the proposed increase in the cost of such liquors as a result of the new tariff law.

New York, which supplies most of the blouses and Italian concerns in this city. I would say that the new tariff on Chilean wines, Italian bitters and cordials, sherries and port wines from Spain and Portugal will cause an increase in the wholesale prices," said Mr. Martinez to a reporter of the Sunday American. "Such liquors are shipped to this city by way of New York. I don't think that the tariff will have anything to do with the consumption of wines and cordons, as the persons who use them will continue using them, regardless of the price."

The manager of the wholesale department of the S. S. Pierce Company, grocers, on Tremont street, said that he did not know how the new tariff would affect the sale of such liquors. Mr. Pierce, he said, who would be more conversant with the

CARLISTS SEEK AID OF THE VATICAN FOR UPRISING IN SPAIN

Followers of the Carlists Are Anxious to Be Assured That Support of the Pope

CAVEJAS REMAINS FIRM

Great Doubt as to Plans for Today at San Sebastian

MADRID, August 7.—The Carlists are anxious to be assured that the Pope will support them in their uprising in Spain. They are particularly anxious to know what the attitude of the Pope will be towards the Carlists. The Carlists are a small but fanatical group who claim to be the true heirs of the Spanish throne. They are opposed to the present government and to the liberal constitution. They are now active in the Basque provinces and in the north of Spain. They are seeking aid from the Pope and from other Catholic powers. They are also seeking aid from the United States. They are hoping to start a revolution in Spain and to establish a Carlist dynasty. They are also hoping to gain the support of the Pope. They are particularly anxious to know what the Pope will do if they succeed in their uprising. They are also anxious to know what the Pope will do if they fail. They are hoping to gain the support of the Pope in either case. They are also hoping to gain the support of the United States. They are particularly anxious to know what the United States will do if they succeed in their uprising. They are also anxious to know what the United States will do if they fail. They are hoping to gain the support of the United States in either case.

The Man With an Imagination!

By Herbert Kaufman

He is the herald of civilization—he proclaims every step of progress; he predicts each enduring and mighty achievement.

His sight pierces the mystery of the horizon and beholds the wonder-works of Tomorrow—his eye reaches beyond the clouds and sees the Martian at his labor.

He peers into the blind depths of the earth and beholds furnaces soon to be summoned to man's service, to urge his wheels and warm his days and light his nights.

He hears the forces of nature calling in strange tones and comprehends their message; he reads Time's Annual, a Century in advance of publication.

He walks in the track of Hope with confidence for his compass. He dares the wilderness, urged onward by the spur of ambition—enduring setback and deprivation—often wearied in body but never in heart.

He is made in the image of the Gods and shares with them the gift of creation. He is blessed with visions. He dreams impossibilities and then transmutes them into actuality.

He saw the papyrus in the reed—the palace in the virgin rock. The mountain torrent under his gaze became transformed into a Titan, to be tamed and taught to serve the needs of commerce.

His will commanded the river to forsake its idle meandering and follow him to where the arid areas were burning with their centuried thirst.

He stood upon the seashore and his soul sped forth in flight across the menacing, tossing vasts to find lands yet unmarked upon the seaman's charts.

All that is best in life—all that is bright and comforting, and wonderful is his handiwork.

His is a finer courage, a greater bravery, than that of brawn.

Since the cave days he has persisted in the face of taunt and sneer. The brutal ages made mock of him. He was a menial in the household of Mars, despised and patronized—cuffed and beaten by Ignorance and Bigotry.

He found no reward in his triumphs—the world crowned him with the fool's cap oftener than the laurel wreath.

But today he sits enthroned, master of the universe—a king come out of bondage into his own.

The cuirass and the broadsword are rusted junk; the epoch of mere muscle is dead; the Thinker is supreme.

The most illustrious page of history has just been turned.

The marvels of our hour are only promises of greater miracles to come.

All that has been will be surpassed. We shall achieve more within a day than our forebears wrought within a decade, and as we climb out of our crudities and weaknesses—as we grow and as we know—we shall grant greater and greater honor and hearken with a constantly increasing respect to THE MAN WITH AN IMAGINATION.

25 Boston Physicians DRIVE HUDSON ROADSTERS

$1000

25 Boston Physicians drive these cars, not as the result of any agreement, but because one doctor who had bought a Hudson found it so well suited to his needs that he recommended it to other physicians and the demand grew.

Salesmen, inspectors, real estate agents as well as doctors find this moderate-priced car ideal in its ease of handling, simplicity of control and small cost of maintenance.

KING HORSE RACE
PREPARED FOR THE
TARBOUR SOCIETY

North and South Shore, Bar Harbor and Newport Plan for Equine Beauty Contests to Excel All Past Events.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT
UNSPRINGING the early days of August are hours of social season in all the seaside resorts. The horse lovers of the North and South Shore, Bar Harbor and Newport, are planning for the coming season a series of events which will be of great interest to the public. The plan is to have a horse show at Bar Harbor on September 10, 11 and 12, and at Newport on September 13, 14 and 15. The shows will be held at the same places as in the past, and the same plan will be followed. The shows will be held at the same places as in the past, and the same plan will be followed. The shows will be held at the same places as in the past, and the same plan will be followed.

NEWPORT HORSE SHOW BOXES TAKEN.
The plan of the show has been already secured by the North Shore, and among the most of the summer shows which have already made entries are Miss Dorothy Jordan, Miss Eleanor Sears, Miss Leslie and Rosamond Bradley, Miss Margaret Thomas and the Misses Allen and Oliver. The South shore, too, is to have its horse show, and the dates are September 10 and 11. This show, unlike the one at Bar Harbor, is to be for the benefit of the Henry M. Whitney estate at Cohasset and for the benefit of the Boston and Maine Railway. The show is to be held at the Cohasset Episcopal church, and the plan is to have a social evening on the same night.

CHARITY IS PRESENT AT NEWPORT.
Even at such a frivolous Newport charity is not overlooked, and the very essence of the fashionable set there are busy with plans for the charity bazaar to be given at the Chateau Theatre the last week in August. The bazaar is to be held at the Chateau Theatre, and the plan is to have a social evening on the same night. The bazaar is to be held at the Chateau Theatre, and the plan is to have a social evening on the same night. The bazaar is to be held at the Chateau Theatre, and the plan is to have a social evening on the same night.

FOR SECOND DINNER DANCE.
At 19 is the date for the second dinner dance of the Boston and Maine Railway. The dinner dance is to be held at the Cohasset Episcopal church, and the plan is to have a social evening on the same night. INSIGHTY ERUPTION ON FACE AND HEAD Afflicted for Months—Burned and Itched—Used Cuticura and He was Cured in Three Weeks—Not Even a Scar Left.

As a grateful mother, I feel it my duty to thank you for the cure of my little son who was afflicted with a terrible eruption on his face and head. He was afflicted for months, and was burned and itched. I used Cuticura and he was cured in three weeks. Not even a scar left.

KEEP WORRY OUT OF YOUR HOUSE

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

IN the old days, when men went out with bows and arrows to earn the bread for themselves and families, a man's cave or tent, or whatever habitation he used, was regarded as sacred to him and to his wife and children.

For another man to meet and fight him in the open was held to be proper and in perfect taste. But for the same man to invade his home—that was an offence not to be forgiven, and it meant death to any one who tried it.

We have gone a little beyond the time when every man's house is his castle. Instead of killing invaders we merely throw them out or put them in jail. But even to-day, when as rapidly as possible we are thickening the crust of civilization that overlays our savagery, it is a man's duty to keep his home sacred, to keep out enemies of all sorts, and to insure as far as possible the comfort and the peace of mind of the wife and children that occupy it.

Against burglars and tramps—even against bill collectors—most houses are fairly well protected. The sanctity of the home is respected by the outsider.

But how about the husband and father, the proud Lord of the Manor, who boasts that nobody can enter his home without his consent—that as long as he has breath in his body he will defend his own against the wicked world?

He guards those who have a right to expect his protection from HUMAN enemies, it is true. He would be such a worthless character that all men would despise him if he did not.

But there are other invaders beside human pests that ought to be kept away from the home, and not the least of them is that hateful monster we call WORRY.

Worry a man must meet in the world. Rich or poor, poet or plumber, railroad president or section hand, it is not to be escaped. If it is not worry about money it is worry about health. If it is not worry about business it is worry about the cost of living or the insolence of office or the half dozen things that Hamlet speculates as reasons for not taking any egotistical interest in life.

Worry, taken moderately, is good for a man. It teaches him to think, and without thinking he will stay in one narrow little rut all his life. It is one of the enemies, like those that were sent against Hercules, which must be met and overcome before a man can feel that he really is a man.

But, for the good of the husband, as well as of the wife and the children, when homes entered worry should be shut out for the night.

It is natural enough for a man who has been struggling and fighting for a living all day long to keep on thinking about his day's work when it is ended. The mind, like inanimate bodies, has a tendency to keep on going in the same direction till something stops or deflects it.

But the worries that harass a man throughout the day are his affairs—not his wife's nor his children's.

Every trouble that he has is a part of his day's work. To bring it home and inflict it upon his wife is as cowardly as it would be to ask his wife to keep his books or perform any of the duties which, as the provider, it is his duty to perform.

If you could enter any one of a thousand homes in your city neighborhood you would find a patient wife, tired with settling the scores of vexations that have troubled her through the day, and waiting wearily for her husband to come home and pour out a harrowing tale of woe on her sympathetic ears.

Let HER begin a recital of her troubles and they will be snuffed at as domestic, and therefore trifling.

Sympathy is not for her. She knows in her heart that her cares are just as real and often harder to bear than those of the man who announces himself as the breadwinner.

She knows that the business of making a very small salary stretch over a very long distance, of clothing and feeding half a dozen children on money enough to feed three comfortably, of guarding them from the evils children so easily learn, of keeping them healthy and happy, is a task that is not to be done without worry—and bitter, heartbreaking worry.

But she knows further that HER worries are not to be aired.

Cheerfulness and patience are expected of her when the head of the family comes home irritable and "grouchy" and recites peevishly the story of some disagreement he has had with his boss and his fear that it will lose him a promotion.

When a man is in real trouble no one is more helpful and sympathetic than his wife. Naturally she is interested in his business, partly because her own welfare depends on its success, mostly because she is interested in him, and has a belief in him that would make him a marvel among men if he only would live up to it.

But all the petty troubles of the office or the shop, the ugliness of an overbearing superior, the threats of a surly customer, the loss of a few dollars in some trifling transaction, the jealous "knocking" of some office associate—spare your wife these, for she never deserves to have them unloaded on her slender shoulders.

There is a distinct physiological effect of worry, causing various disharmonies in the body, and sometimes ending in physical as well as mental breakdown. If you had scarlet fever or any other contagious disease you wouldn't go home with it and do everything you could to give it to your wife! Of course not! That would be criminal.

Yet! That is just as contagious, just as weakening and just as evil as any of those diseases. Why, then, pass your affliction on to her?

There is another aspect of the question. Worry weakens. Worry is not the careful, cool contemplation of facts with the idea of finding a way to cope with them. It is a mental wringing of the hands against the condition which one feels he has not strength to meet or overcome. Worry is the weakening in us which it is the duty of the will to try to overcome.

Home should be a co-operative institution. Matrimony is a partnership. No level-headed business man will deliberately hurt his business or sap his resources by hampering his partner. You can see the effects of this in the case of the small-minded employer, whose idea of keeping his employees up to the scratch is to worry them. This kind of employer is never a constructive one. His idea of stimulation is, to nag, which destroys ambition. His idea of gaining respect is to threaten his employees with the loss of their position. Broad-minded employers are those who, having picked out a man for their work, let that man go ahead with the work and do not nag or worry him.

Why, then, should you destroy the business which is your home? Why should you weaken your partner—your wife—and harass and nag her so she cannot carry on her part of your agreement, and deprive your children of so much of the home atmosphere which they need and should have?

Worry may be an American habit, but since 1776 we have been taught that a greater American habit was courage, and the courageous man bears his own burdens uncomplainingly and without faltering.

It may very well be that you are tired enough to hate the entire world when you come home at 6 o'clock. In common with some twenty or thirty millions of other wage earners you have met with injustice and oppression and unfairness and perhaps malice.

Possibly you have brought a large share of these things upon yourself, but they are, nevertheless, rankling at the end of the day.

The weather has been hot. Coming home there was a crowd in the trolley car or the elevated or the subway. You were jostled and trampled upon. Your dignity was ruffled. You felt that you were far from being a sovereign citizen.

But for none of these indignities was your wife responsible.

In the conspiracy which you may fancy has been entered into against you certainly your children could have had no part.

Then why "take it out" of them? Why make them unhappy with your wrongs and grievances when they have wrongs of their own that they ought to be made to forget when you take your place at the head of the table in the evening?

It Is a Duty a Man Ows to His Family to Spare Them the Troubles and Vexations That He Must Encounter in Business.

Rather be thankful that it was you and not they who are daily subjected to the annoyances of earning a living.

Be glad that because you are a man and can fight you can keep your home happy and free from all the bickerings of the market and all the squabbles of the shop.

Gladly the mother saves her children knowledge of the sorrows that come to her in life. Many a woman has used all her ingenuity in concealing a father's drunkenness from his babies.

If the pain is only for her, and not for the children, she will bear it willingly and with no complaining.

It is hardly fair that ALL the self-sacrifice should be hers.

Providing for the family is often a hard, grievous business, but remember it is only half of the domestic partnership.

The worry incident to it belongs to the job. Saddle it yourself, bear up under it the best you can, and when you come home at night leave it at the front gate.

And in making the rest of the family happy because of your presence the "cares that infest the day" will somehow seem of less importance, and you will really come to know some of the joy of living.

THE SUICIDE

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Vast was their earth I carried in life's back—
Youth, heart, ambition, hope, and trust. But Time
And Fate, those robbers fit for any crime.
Stole all and left me with the empty shell.
Before me lay a long and lonely track
Of wandering hills and barren steeps
To climb.
Behind me lay in snows the sublime
Lost lands of love's delight. Alack!
Alack!
Unwearied and with springing step
I ate
I had to yield my wealth along the road.
The empty sea was now a heavier load.

It was borne down beneath its worthless weight.
I stumbled on and knuckled at death's dark gate.
There was no answer. Stung by sorrow's goads,
I forced my way into that grim abode.
And laughed and flung life's empty shell to Fate.
Unknown and unmoved I passed in That strange land which lies between two seas.
Rode which a dark and solemn river rolls.
More a dead silence than the earth's lost dream.
And no where was the peace I hoped to win?
Back-masted ships sailed by me in great shoals.

Their bloody decks thronged with unhappy souls.
God punishes mistakes, sometimes,
like sin.
Not rest, and not oblivion I found;
My suffering self dwelt with me just the same.
But here no sleep was, and no
sweet dreams came.
To give me respite. Tyrant Death
unmoved
By my own hand, still King of terror, drowned
Upon my shuddering soul that sank in shame,
Before those eyes where sorrow
dwelt with blame.
And those accusing lips that made no sound.
What gruesome snaps dawned on my startled sight!

It was awful aghs broke on my listening ear.
The anguish of the earth, agony.
A thousand fold, made one continuous cry.
The sack, flung away in impious spite Hung just upon me, filled I saw, in air.
In tears that rained from earth's adjacent spheres.
And turned to stone in falling from that height.
And close about me pressed a grieving throng.
On with his lean-fac'd, thin
prowed him so.
His face was hidden. One of these moaned "Know

Who enters here but finds the way more long
To those fair realms where sounds the angel's song.
There is no man made exit out of this place.
We cannot beat the locked door
down and go To claim thy rightful joys through paths of wrong."
He passed into the shadows dim and gray.
And left me to pursue my path alone.
For terror greater than I yet had known.
Hark! My soul this awful knocking day!
Death had not ended life, nor found God's way!

But with my same sad sorrow still my own.
Where byroads led to byroads thrille sown.
I had but wandered off, and gone astray.
With earth still near enough to hear its signs.
Wah! heaven afar, and hell but just below.
Still on and on my lonely soul must roam.
Until I earned the moral right to rise.
We cannot force our way to Paradise.
Nor know into the rest we long to reach.
But patiently, with tireless feet, and slow.
We must toil on till self in Godhood dies.

THE TROUBLES OF THE HOT WEATHER TIME

By T. E. POWERS, THE EVENING AMERICAN'S CELEBRATED CARTOONIST.

ART IN PUMPKINVILLE.

BY CHARLES NOEL DOUGLAS.

ARTISTIC skill's hit Pumpkinville an awful whack, and we
The craze have got, and soon a lot of millionaires we'll be;
We've made a start to study art, with nerve sublimely cool,
And we're taking drawing lessons from a correspondence school.

TEN months I vow, Pop's studied now, with ardor that's sublime,
Up fame's artistic ladder he's determined that he'll climb;
He laughs with scorn at ruined corn, the farm has gone to wreck,
But he's winning fast, for Pop, at last, has learned to DRAW A CHECK.

SISTER Kate's an artist great, she's taking lessons, too, Mike Angelo and Raphael she'll outclass even she's through;
Those masters old she's whipped 'em cold, artistic oil she's struck,
For Sister Kate's had lessons eight, and now can DRAW A DUCK.

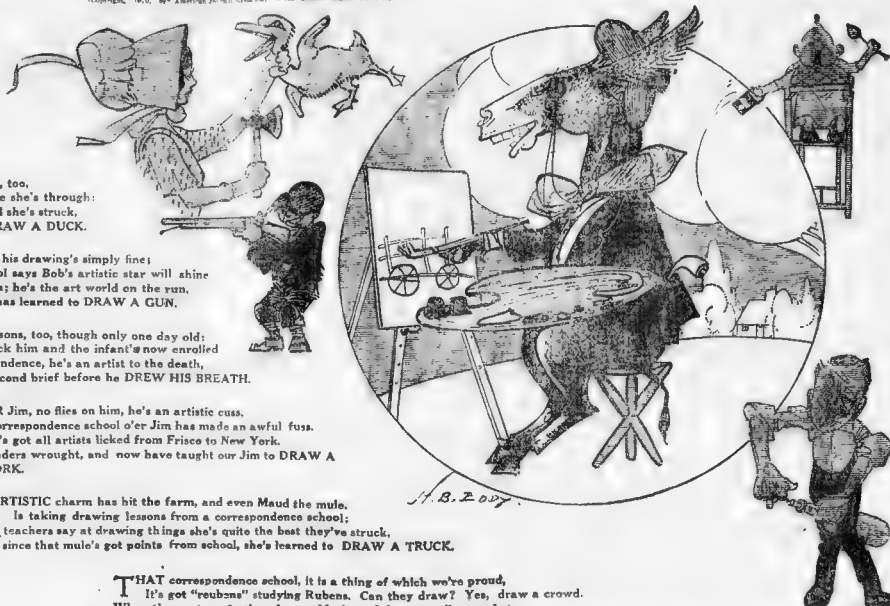

BROTHER BOB is on the job, his drawing's simply fine;
The correspondence school says Bob's artistic star will shine
When Rembrandt is forgotten; he's the art world on the run,
For after months of study Bob has learned to DRAW A GUN.

THE baby's taking lessons, too, though only one day old;
Artistic fever's struck him and the infant's now enrolled
At the school of correspondence, he's an artist to the death,
For he had not lived a second brief before he DREW HIS BREATH.

BROTHER Jim, no flies on him, he's an artistic cuss,
The correspondence school o'er Jim has made an awful fuss.
They say he's got all artists licked from Frisco to New York,
They've wonders wrought, and now have taught our Jim to DRAW A CORK.

ARTISTIC charm has hit the farm, and even Maud the mule,
Is taking drawing lessons from a correspondence school;
The teachers say at drawing things she's quite the best they've struck,
For since that mule's got points from school, she's learned to DRAW A TRUCK.

THAT correspondence school, it is a thing of which we're proud,
It's got "reubens" studying Rubens. Can they draw? Yes, draw a crowd.
When they eat mush, they draw a blush, and draw a smile, you bet,
But strange, by gum, not one at "hum" can DRAW A PICTURE YET.

THE NEWEST JOKES TOLD BY THE COMEDIANS

By GEORGE EVANS.

A MAN sent into a drug store
asked of the clerk:
"Do you keep the best medicines here?"

"You can get no better," replied the clerk.

"Well, if I can get no better, what's the need of me buying the medicine?"

"I'd just as soon eat poison as a colored person," remarked an old colored woman in the South.

"I'd rather," returned the parson, "be a colored person than a white-haired dork."

"Because," explained the parson, "a man can generally eat poison with good consequence."

FOR breakfast one morning in a restaurant I ordered some eggs. As the waitress was bringing them to me she stumbled and one of the hen fell on the floor.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "I have dropped an egg. 'What shall I do?'"

"Make a noise like a hen," said I.

WHEN I came out of the restaurant I stood for a moment wondering which way I would go. A young couple came along and stopped in front of the eating place.

"My," said the girl, "doesn't that steak smell good?"

The fellow had his hands in his pockets, and from where I stood it looked as though he were tactfully counting his money. After a brief pause he said:

"Yes, it does. Let's stand here a while and smell it."

I ONCE heard an old colored lady in the South say:
"Some folks are mighty much worried about style. That new calico dress you gave me Christmas has been puzzlin' me some. Polonaise is right, toward the end of the week, the style now, but I think I'll have the heavy man and the heavy woman make make wrapper."

TWO drummers got to talking one day about the hotels they had stopped at, and one of them spoke of it: "No, but you will be tomorrow at the St. Regis. He said that he had a friend who was a New York one morning very hungry, and really needed a square meal, but he didn't have the money to spare. He had only $10.00 and got into the St. Regis and got a cup of coffee."

ON the way up he asked the conductor: "Do you stop at the St. Regis?"

"What, on $12 a week? I guess not," replied the conductor.

The conductor said it was the only hotel in the world where guests and waiters change places every year, and this year's guests are next year's waiters, and vice versa.

I WAS standing with two or three of my friends on a street corner in New York on a long tour and other side. All this was being greatly enjoyed by the fellow's friends, about. One of the party was just as though he was taking his position pressing a wish when he was back on very seriously. As we were passing the White Way when an old native along one particularly windy stretch trap of a car came along, down by a one ducky in the crowd yelled out:

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

"See him, wind!"

A RE you are these corsets are unbreakable?" asked the doubtful customer.

"I have been wearing a pair myself for a year," said the shop girl, "and they are not broken yet. And," she continued, blushing, "I'm engaged."

"What would they be scratching themselves for when there were only three days in the ark?"

"Oh, I suppose they lost loaded around and scratched themselves."

"What would they be scratching themselves for when there were only three days in the ark?"

"Oh, I suppose they lost loaded around and scratched themselves."

LITTLE

THOMAS JR. WHO

ARMS BY A LION

Cleveland, Tenn., July 10.—
OVER the hills into Cleveland, this little mountain city which nestles among the Tennessee hills, came rolling a travelling carnival company. It was quite the most elaborate thing of its kind that had ever visited Cleveland. There were lions, leopards, great bears, wonderful clowns and horses, glittering men and women to ride them who seemed to come from another world.
Over the mountains to see the show came scores of hardy mountaineer men and women and children, driving in old ox carts, queer ancient carry-alls, on horseback and trudging along on foot. Among them were Stephen Thomas and his wife, country folk, who lived many miles away from Cleveland in the heart of the hills. With them was their little four-year-old son, Stephen Junior, whom Mrs. Thomas held tightly to her breast as she swayed upon the back of her horse.
By night the little city was crowded, and the flickering lights about the big tents of the circus fell upon hundreds of wondering faces. Across the menagerie tent stretched a big red banner which announced the

which had been erected in front of the tent and from which the "barker" cried, there appeared substantial evidence of some of the wonderful things to be shown in the person of Captain Curley Wilson, the wild animal trainer, and a ferocious looking lion. The lion, held only by a chain attached to a stout post, looked sleepily through half closed eyes at the throng peeping at him.

The Thomases, drawn by these new wonders, edged ever closer to the platform. Little Stephen was still held close to his mother's breast, while his father and mother were absorbed in what was going on. The lion caught sight of the child in front of him. What instinct was aroused and he

WHY CLEVER PEOPLE WRITE 'EM

Not Second Childhood, But SECOND YOUTH, With All Its Unrestrained Boyish and Girlish Romance, Says Psychology, Analyzing What Prompts Those Gushy, Mushy Love Letters.

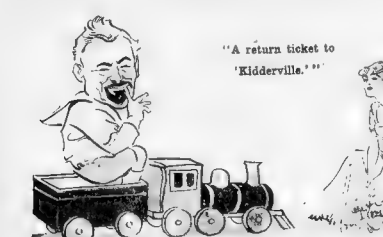

By Professor Max Baff.
Fellow in Psychology, Clark University, Worcester, Mass., M. D. Columbia University.

WHY do highly educated men and women—men of letters and women of letters—write those gushy, mushy love letters that seem to come from a second childhood? It is not a second childhood, but a second youth, with all its unrestrained boyish and girlish romance, says psychology, analyzing what prompts those gushy, mushy love letters.

only be explained on the ground that the writers are entering a second youth, not second childhood, and that the gushy letters are the result of a second youth, with all its unrestrained boyish and girlish romance, says psychology, analyzing what prompts those gushy, mushy love letters.

years. The newly born bald-headed baby and the worn-out old man are both of the same age, and the same is true of the old people. It is of daily occurrence to witness how exceedingly few it is for most men of mature years to be caused to laugh or cry. Education and culture cannot do so after a certain point in life. Prolongation of life is a result of various people, but it is the emotions of children can always be observed in old age.

The case of Miss Helen Woodruff, of Hartford, and young Russell, of New York, who has lived her life in the promise of marriage, is an extraordinary psychological interest. It is an illustration, among many other things, of the increasing tendency of women to assume the mental characteristics of practically reasoning in his boyhood.

"She loved with my affections," says young Mr. Graveland. "I wrote him letters," says Miss Smith. "But I never even hinted at marriage."

Miss Smith is a woman of mature years, already divorced from one man of public prominence, handsome, well educated, and a man of a wide experience of the world. The title she gives for her love letters is "Kidderville."

These love letters have the crudity and irreverence that are characteristic of a child's mind. They are not the gushy letters of a second youth, but the gushy letters of a second childhood.

Some Very Odd Love Letters.

Below are some of the love letters of Miss Helen Woodruff to young Russell Graveland. The letters are of the most gushy and mushy kind, and are full of the crudity and irreverence that are characteristic of a child's mind. They are not the gushy letters of a second youth, but the gushy letters of a second childhood.

Dear Russell—

I have just received your letter of the 10th. It was a little hard to be called a vampire. Yet, after all, I can understand how you feel.

Her Baby Corn from Her Arms by the Jaws of a Lion.

no one can say, but the big green eyes of the beast opened, and then without warning the lion sprang to its feet, thrust its paws out and tore the child from the arms of the mother.

There was a moment of terror-stricken silence, then a shout of terror arose from the crowd.

"He's got the baby! Shout him! No, don't you! Kill the child!"

A hundred guns were fired by the mob, and the lion sprang to its feet, thrust its paws out and tore the child from the arms of the mother.

and caught the dress of the child in its mouth, and carried it to a corner of the stage.

Trainer Wilson, the ape, barked, made one leap toward the corner where the baby lay over the railing.

The platform, guns were drawn, but were held back by the sight of one of the most lurid exhibitions of nerve the lion showed.

Wilson thrust his right arm down from the mouth of the lion, reaching for the child. The lion's jaws, releasing the trainer, drove the ape back to the corner.

In the meantime Mrs. Stewart had been trying to get to the platform and wrestle with the lion for the life of her baby. Friends held her back, but she would not be deterred.

When was then placed up by a dozen heavy mountaineers and carried to his quarters. There they bathed up his arm, and the lion had no more to do with him.

"You can have our farm or anything else we've got," said the mountaineers, "but if you ever get in our way again, we'll shoot you down."

The next day when the show left town it was accompanied by a guard of honor. Mrs. Stewart and little Thomas were on horseback with the arm was fastened to the lion's back.

"It was a brave man," said the mountaineers, "and he was a good judge of a lion."

"My Painted Thoughts of Glad, Sad, Bad New York."

By Clover Leist

"So at last to the infinite love of my brain."

POOR old New York! Every one wants to live in her skyscrapers, her Broadway—recently closed by order of the Mayor—and all her curious phenomena into terms sure to make the writers famous. Mary McLane perpetrated several outcries. Young Mr. Vievech, the odd poet, fell back upon Nines and Babylon and last most curious Lady Paaphas, to write her! And these are only a few. And now comes Miss Clover Leist—yes, that's her real name—with her "Painted Thoughts." Miss Leist paints her thoughts at a very small age in a New York business house. Even she will issue a book full of them. Besides being strongly Whitmanesque, Arthur Symonds and again Whitmanesque, Miss Leist is strongly original. As this, among all that has been written about New York, is the first time "Painted Thoughts" have been applied to it, Miss Leist's viewpoint is interesting, and samples of the paint which is used in the forthcoming book are given here with her permission.

THE MANBEAST

THE peering, covetous eyes of the manbeast. And the writhes and lures of women, hiding their terror of the manbeast. Like great armies of rats they swarm the sewers, eating of the city's crumbs and infesting the air with foulness. The manbeast, unvenured of education and conversation. And the beautiful, shrinking bodies of women. Men seeking their will of women. Old men; very young men; mature men; fat men; lean men; ugly men; rich men; idle men. Always their peering, covetous eyes. Blocking street corners and loitering horribly of evil. Desecrating homes and churches. And menacing women in all the ways she would go. The manbeast is primitive man. He is of the undereducated, underfed class—the great illiterate. He has no fastidious passions. He has a woman lust.

LIGHTS O' LOVE O' BROADWAY

THE lights, the little lights of love. And the little feet going by. Always the seeking feet going by. Stalkers of the night. From behind painted eyes their souls look out wearily. Their young woman's bodies are meaningless. Their womanhood desecrated. They are the scored of the earth. The nameless and unrecognized of law. The prey of the manbeast. Poor puppets! From whom good men and good women avert their eyes. And from whom the young and the old turn in warring horror. Leaden thoughts and gray ashes of life. Old men; very young men; mature men; fat men; lean men; ugly men; rich men; idle men. Always their peering, covetous eyes. Blocking street corners and loitering horribly of evil. Desecrating homes and churches. And menacing women in all the ways she would go. The manbeast is primitive man. He is of the undereducated, underfed class—the great illiterate. He has no fastidious passions. He has a woman lust.

COSMIC WOMAN

THE woman of New York and the cosmic woman. And always beneath the... of her art. She, there, is the inseparable bond of sex. The good woman and the bad. The woman of virginal, chaste mein whose soul is feebly with fastidious thoughts. And the little light of love within whose soul a thin flame of beauty burns with conjuring up a hallowed piece in her body of corruption. The woman of extraordinary brain, and the woman whose brains are as an unpowered field in early spring. The sheltered woman and the... with all the unnumbered characteristics of this... The woman who goes out into the world of men and fights valiantly... the unsheltered woman—who is as once to strong and weak, she is who comes to know all that life is a game to be played with a sportsman's true instinct for fair play. And she it is who joys in the living. The woman who evades nothing, but accepts life simply, directly and with a sheer "cassidy" of daring. The diaphanous folly of woman. Her fascinating vanities. Her beautiful intelligence and vast ignorance. An almost wild intuition, which in a man is called judgment. Her tender heart and a disposition to pretty rob Peter to pay Paul. The ruthlessness that is the rap of an idle woman's wit. And the Pandora's box of little sins and pleasures which make largely toward the... personality. To sum it up—enchancing woman-kind. And if I do measure their worth too closely, it is with an intimate knowledge of human values. And if my young scorn of much that is tawdry and false is ruthless as a tiger's paw, it is tempered by love and pity and a common understanding, for it is the part of all women to smile and for a moment pause, while beneath the outer garments of their lightest dress they wait in the shining armor of battle—vigilant and alert.

APRIL

MARVELOUS chemistry of the seasons! The calendar points to April. Veiled sunshine and purple mists of April. Yellow dais and gray days of April. The gorgeous ardor of April in New York City. Nature and art hand in hand. Flower shop and market place with early flowers and vegetables in cultivation. Flower vendors with gay trays of jonquils and violets. Radiant women, themselves flowers of Spring, in brilliant habiliments of the season. Hatter and tailor to supply the less gayly plumaged male in symbolizing all that April month voices. Spring in the strident notes of the street organ; in the incessant hand organ. Spring on Fifth Avenue and in the Ghetto. Spring in the harbor with the launching of new ships and old ones. And, above all, the riotous hearts of April and the... renewed with hope.

"The diaphanous folly of woman!"

"The prey of the manbeast."

meanneesses and great ones; free from sullen jealousies and vain envies; of yellow greed and of inhospitalities to those I count friends. In fact: I would keep my soul faithful to its trust of friendship and a fount of pity for all who need of it.

MY SUBWAY NEIGHBOR

VERY young children, their soft bodies and man-talities plant of moulding along hereditary patterns, or left to shape their destinies as they will. Futuristic eyes of the very old, suspicious of strange people and new ways. Wealth and poverty rubbing elbows. An actress, unadorned, enviously simple in her garb, and beside her a woman of fashion, resplendent in a New York type, ornate, bizarre. Men of all nations and women of all nations—the countless humans who... my neighbor, and who Chance has thrown together for a brief... in such striking antitheses.

"April in New York! Spring on Fifth Avenue and in the Ghetto!"

I HAVE MY SOUL TO KEEP

I HAVE my soul to keep. My indomitable soul. In New York it is not easy to do—this keeping of one's soul. Young blood and the joy of living. A poignant sorrow—and momentary abandon. Poetic seduction of the forbidden. These and many things make for forgetfulness that one has a soul to keep. Sometimes I forget. But always my indomitable soul comes seeking me again. It is so fine and beautiful a soul. It will not be lost. It is a rainbow of promise—this soul of mine—many-colored with forgetfulness. I have my living to make and my soul to keep. The incongruity of it. I wonder if the keeping of one's soul and the earning of one's living are as difficult for all young women as they are for me? I do a man's work—out in the world of men. And I earn a man's wage. But I am a woman—and young. Wage earning is becoming more and more a war of the sexes, wherein man conquers by might, and woman has for her age-old weapons the smiles and lies of her safeguard. It is just as necessary for women to lie out in the world as it is for a man to shoot in self-defense. Lies are a woman's safeguard—her protection. So I smile, and I lie. Yet under the white lies of my defense my soul does enemy of them. Nor under the flaming lies of my friend's defense. But this would I do: Keep my soul free from little

"Nothing but the ghosts of joy that might have been."

IT IS OUR HERITAGE

IN the heart of woman there is a passion for beautiful adornment. And in the shops there are feminine fashionings of fine of fabric and lovely of color. Other young women and I look wistfully into these shop windows. We, too, would adorn ourselves with beauty, for such is our heritage. But we cannot. So these young women and I look wistfully into the shop windows. And in the hearts of many there are dreams of a future some day when they, too, can adorn themselves with beauty. And in the hearts of others there is a yellow envy and a great rage. While still others there are who would barter their bodies for the outer garments of their beauty, for such is their heritage. For they have no brain of painted thoughts. The wonderful, painted thoughts that color my brain with beauty and fashion for me habiliments of contentment.

"Voice of the desert!"

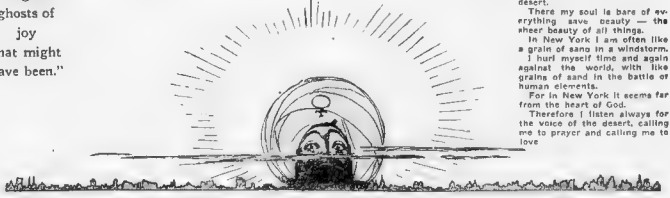

THE INFINITE LOVES OF ME

Oh, the infinite loves of me! The little loves that make of each day a promise or a fulfillment. And the great loves that are farthest of life and my Three Fates, and which follow me in all the ways I would go. The thousand loves of everyday, passing and repassing, each a madrigal of joy. The infinite loves of my wanderlust, whose voices call me to all the delectable places of the earth. And the wandering feet of me that fain would go where the somnolent heart of me has been turning away. My night loves. The yellow lights of the city and the countless Pierrots and Pierrettes of folly. Fair women and strong men. The turbulent night thoughts of love. Innumerable sounds and voices of the night. And all the night loves that stir—my senses in delight. A picture in a shop window and occasional verse in magazines—little loves of passing. Go at last to the infinite love of my brain.

"Who would barter themselves for adornment."

THE VOICE OF THE DESERT

THERE is a desert song of freed slaves which stirs me profoundly. "No one but God and I know what is in my heart." It is the slave's song in the desert as he runs along, in the sun, and it is my song in New York. In the desert I am very close to the heart of God. Nothing but sky and sand—and God. The blazoned eternity of the sands and the vast solitude of them. In the desert the eye of men is merged in its tense solitude. He is a slave singing in the sun. He sings of God and love. I, too, am a slave in the desert. There my soul is bare of everything save beauty—the sheer beauty of all things. In New York I am often like a grain of sand in a wilderness. I hurt myself time and again against the world, with like grains of sand in the battle of human elements. For in New York it seems far from the heart of God. Therefore I listen always for the voice of the desert, calling me to prayer and calling me to love.

Some of the most interesting and profitable marriages in the history of the world have been those of the "poor man" who has married a "rich woman." The case of Mr. Gillespie, a New York City salary earner of $7,000 a year, who is to marry a "Sherman twin," who never wears the same thing twice and spends $14,390 on her Newport outfit, is a case in point. The marriage is being celebrated in the city of New York, and the bride is being escorted to the altar by a party of her friends. The groom is a man of good family and good education, and the bride is a woman of good family and good education. The marriage is a case of a "poor man" marrying a "rich woman," and it is a case that is being celebrated in the city of New York.

By Mme. Lina Cavallieri,
the Most Famous Living Beauty.

MADAME CAVALIERI writes most charmingly this week about her "Complexion Garden," in which she grows simple herbs that are of value in heightening beauty and preserving health. She tells American women how they may make such a garden an ornament to the home and a benefit to themselves. Next week Madame Cavaleri will write about "Remedies for Summer Pests."

Hair's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer keeps the scalp clean and healthy. Makes the hair-balls active and strong. As a result, the hair grows more rapidly, does not split at the ends, keeps soft and smooth, and color is not affected, even to the slightest degree.

Hair's Hair Renewer also stops falling hair. It does this quickly and thoroughly. You apply the Renewer: the hair stops coming out—that is all there is to it. Let your doctor decide all questions.
